Q 1 Read the following passage and answer the questions by writing the option you consider most appropriate. (5)

As one enters Kollugudipatti, a small village on the Melur - Tirupattur Road, Tamil Nadu, a stern message – HUNTING PROHIBITED – greets you.

In this village lives a close-knit community of 50 families, whose members have two aims in life: to look after the interests of the village and to protect the migratory birds that visit this village in the month of July and begin nesting soon after.

Some of the migratory birds that come regularly to nest here are spoonbills, night herons, egrets and cormorants.

A patch of marshy land in waist-deep water creates a mangrove that safely houses these migratory birds. The birds are treated with great respect and the villagers have names for each one of them. Interestingly, all the activities in the village revolve around these feathered visitors whose security is of prime importance to the villagers.

The people of Kollugudipatti have unanimously decided against celebrating Deepavali in the village. It is a time for silence during the festival, as the villagers believe that crackers will scare the birds away. The migratory birds lay their eggs during this season and the hatching of the eggs coincides with Deepavali.

Voices become choked with emotion when the villagers describe how Deepavali crackers are likely to frighten the birds and chicks. They believe that if any of the birds were to falter* and fall from their nests, they will never return to roost again! And if the birds never came again, the villagers believe that Kollugudipatti would be hit by misfortune!

The birds may be unaware of the sacrifice made by this caring community every Deepavali, but there is a lesson in it for everyone of us!

*falter: [here] to move in a way that is not steady.

Read the following passage and answer the questions:-

Q 2 Lee Whang [1501-1570] was one of the most distinguished scholars in Korean history. He was known not only for his scholastic achievements but also for his virtues and wisdom. One day a young scholar was on his way to Lee Whang's study to receive private instruction. He came to a stream with no bridge. There were no stepping-stones either. In order to cross the stream he would have to take off his socks and shoes, and roll up his baggy pants. He thought it was too undignified for a Yang Bay [a person from the elite class] to do that. He looked around. Nearby, an old man was gathering wood twigs for fuel. The young scholar beckoned the old man and said to him, "You could possibly expect a Yang Bay like me to take off my shoes and socks, and get my feet wet. Carry me on your back to the other side of the stream." (5)

The old man gladly agreed. He let the young scholar get on his back and started crossing the stream. The young scholar asked the old man, 'Do you know the way to "Do San Suwon"?' [This was Lee Whang's private study.]

'Yes, sir,' answered the old man.

'Then you must know the famous scholar Lee Whang?'

'Of course, I know him very well.'

'How do you know Lee Whang?' the young scholar asked. Beaming with a smile on his wrinkled face, the old man answered, 'I am Lee Whang.'

Can you imagine how the young scholar must have felt? He felt as if he were struck by lightning. He was so embarrassed that he did not know what to do. The young man begged Lee Whang to allow him to get off his back. But, Lee Whang kept going calmly saying, 'You might as well remain on my back until we cross the stream.' He carried him to the other side.

Koreans hold men of virtue and wisdom like Lee Whang in the highest respect. 'Ears of rice humbly bend as the rice ripens,' says a Korean proverb.

1. Why did the young scholar not want to cross the stream?
