SECTION- A (READING) 20 Marks

1. Read the passage and answer the questions given below:
 1. Even in today's digital world, every Indian's morning starts with a steaming cup of tea or coffee and a crisp fresh newspaper. An Indian can do without a government but not without its media. If the media were to go silent, tea stalls and "tapri" cafes would run out of business, family gatherings would lose their special heated discussions and parties would turn tasteless and bland. Our media not only affects our country's political and social scenario, but also affects the people's social lives. We the people of India, in our preamble swear to make this country "a sovereign, socialist, democratic republic" and without the support of the fourth pillar of our democracy, that is impossible. Media as watchdog keeps an eye on the workings of the government, ensuring that it is always on its toes working for the development of the country. It is the eyes and ears of the general public, without these senses, the common man would be nothing more than a puppet at the hands of the politicians. Every great personage has stressed the importance of a free and unbiased media, be it Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Mahatma Gandhi or Nelson Mandela.
 2. However, today when the newspaper pages are coloured with gossips rather than facts, news channels are more interested in TRP than the truth and social media is running astray with rumours, one may have second thoughts about the significance of their eyes and ears. The media has become more a propagator of emotions than that of information. It distorts, mutilates and twists facts to fit a picture that can be best sold in the market. Moreover, they sprinkle it with tangy spices to make it look more appealing. Hence what comes in front of the common man is not news but "bhel". India is the biggest market for the 4th pillar of democracy with over 82,237 registered newspapers, being circulated across different regions, and almost 700 television news channel, running all over India, and these numbers are increasing day by day. For social media platforms also namely Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and Whatsapp India provides for their largest user base because of its lenient and restriction free cyber laws. With a market so huge, number of contenders also increase and hence comes in commercialisation which kills the news neutrality. Corporates were quick to figure that the highest profit would come to the one that was close to the centre of power and hence began the trend of selective reporting and imposing of views rather than their presentation. Courtesy to this race for profit, media houses made rogue people, overnight celebrities and forgot to lend an ear to the flood victims in Assam because a T.V. actress had commit suicide. This selective coverage sees no boundaries as the media runs trials of the court on public platform and makes drama out of sensitive cases like Arushi Talwar's murder case. Their accusations on judicial institutions, IB and even the army forced our former president Hon. Mr. Pranab Mukherjee to give a formal statement curbing this "circus". He said, "Discussion and dissension are crucial for a spirited democracy, and it must hold public institutions accountable for all their actions and inactions. There should always be room for the argumentative Indian, and not the intolerant Indian. The media must be the watchdog, the mediator between the leaders and the public".
 3. Media in any democracy is a vital necessity. The first step towards a totalitarian or any other dictatorship is the suppressing of the free press because for such a government to strive, it is necessary that the people remain uninformed. Hence, our media is our eyes and ears. It is the link between us and those sitting on statures of high power. We need to ensure that the foundation of this pillar remains firm and erect, and greed, corruption and power do not eat through it.
